OUR STORY

About Zeporah

Zeporah was created for families trying to hold everything together when someone they love becomes seriously ill or passes away.

When a loved one receives a serious diagnosis, life can change quickly. Families may suddenly be managing doctors, hospice conversations, caregiving, appointments, paperwork, difficult questions, fear, and decisions they never expected to face. Then, when death comes, the responsibilities do not stop. There may be a funeral to plan, relatives to update, documents to find, accounts to handle, benefits to contact, and countless details that can feel impossible while grieving.

Zeporah was inspired by my aunt Annie Anita April. In 2024, she was diagnosed with stage 4 cancer. My family did what families do when someone they love is sick. We focused on hope, treatment, care, and being present with her. We did not realize how quickly we would be forced to make difficult decisions or how much we would have to figure out on our own.

We spent hours looking for answers, making calls, searching for resources, and trying to understand what was supposed to happen next. We were grieving, but we were also organizing, planning, researching, and trying not to miss anything important.

WHY ZEPORAH EXISTS

Zeporah is being built to make this process feel less overwhelming. It gives families one private place to organize responsibilities, communicate with people they trust, keep track of important information, and find support when they need it.

Zeporah is not here to tell families what to do. It is here to make the path easier to understand when everything feels unfamiliar.

Our goal is simple: families should have more room to care for the people they love, more space to grieve, and less time spent trying to navigate everything alone.

Zeporah gives families one private place to stay organized, connected, and supported through serious illness, loss, and the months that follow.

OUR PURPOSE

Mission

Zeporah creates space for families to care, grieve, and move forward by bringing clarity, connection, and compassionate coordination to serious illness and loss.

SUPPORTING BELIEF
We make overwhelming responsibilities more manageable so families can focus on the people and moments that matter most.

WHAT GUIDES US

Core Values

These principles shape how Zeporah serves families: with compassion, clarity, dignity, and respect for each family's choices.

Care First

Every family deserves patience, warmth, and respect—never fear, urgency, guilt, or pressure.

"People matter more than processes."

The Loved One Remains at the Center

A person is more than a diagnosis, funeral, account, or checklist. Their story, wishes, and memory deserve care.

"Every responsibility begins with someone who is loved."

Families Are Stronger Together

Clear roles, communication, and boundaries help trusted people share responsibility with care.

"No one should have to carry the weight alone."

Clarity Brings Comfort

Families deserve clear direction without endless searching, calls, or uncertainty.

"Clear direction creates room to breathe."

Families Stay in Control

Families decide what to share, who to invite, and when they are ready for support.

"Support happens on the family's terms."

Dignity Is Non-Negotiable

Care must honor privacy, culture, faith, relationships, finances, and each family's way of grieving.

"Every family deserves dignity in every detail."

Support Continues

A family's need for care does not end with a diagnosis, funeral, or burial.

"The hardest day is not the last day support may be needed."

THE SUPPORT FAMILIES CAN COUNT ON

Strategic Pillars

From the first difficult conversation through the months after loss, Zeporah gives families a calmer way to stay informed, connected, and supported.

01

Clear direction when life changes

A calm place to begin when serious illness, hospice, or loss makes it hard to know what needs attention first. Zeporah organizes next steps and makes clear what can wait.

02

One place to hold what matters

Important tasks, contacts, documents, updates, and decisions stay organized in one private space instead of being scattered across texts, folders, emails, and notebooks.

03

Shared responsibility with care

Trusted people can step in, take on clear roles, and support the family without adding more confusion or exposing private information.

04

A path to the right support

A clearer way to find resources, community support, and qualified professionals when families need them.

05

Care that continues after the hardest day

Support remains available through the responsibilities, changes, and emotional weight that follow a funeral or burial.

Space to grieve.
Support to move forward.

You do not have to do everything today.

THE ZEPORAH PROMISE

A private, compassionate place for families to find direction, share responsibility, and make room for the people and moments that matter most.
